

LOLA AND HER TOYS

As she sorted the toys, Lola felt contented and soon discovered what really made her happy. She realized the importance of enjoying different experiences, not just things.

Once the hard work was finished, she went down to the kitchen to regain her energy and rest for a while. Lola looked inside the refrigerator and decided to make herself a chorizo sandwich with a large glass of cold milk. Very carefully, so she would not spill a drop, she sat comfortably on the couch.

While Lola was eating her snack, her father came home from work. After giving her a kiss, he sat with her for a while to chat and asked her how her day had been. Lola took advantage of that moment to tell him about her future birthday plans and how she had realized that she had too many things that she barely used. At first, her father was very surprised, since he did not expect Lola to be so mature for her age. He felt very proud of her daughter and did not hesitate to grant her wish.

The next day, Lola and her family went to the church in her neighborhood to donate all the toys that she was not going to use. They knew that the children of families more needy than her would be able to enjoy them. Then, they all went to the lake in the park to fly the kite that Lola had decided to keep. It was a very special day for everyone, as they enjoyed the pleasure of being able to spend quality time with their family.
