Teachers in college are called professors. Teachers teach and share knowledge with students. Teachers of younger students teach them to read and write while older students learn other courses, such as mathematics and science.

Teachers are responsible for preparing the lessons, giving classes to the students, tutoring the students, controlling discipline in the classroom, taking attendance, correcting homework, giving exams, and giving grades for the students.

In their work, teachers use blackboards, computers, art supplies, books, notebooks, pencils, and other school supplies. Above all, they need students who want to learn. Teachers can work in pre-school centers, daycares, elementary schools, high schools, and universities.
