1. Dr. Seuss's Birthday – March 2, 1904

What's for Breakfast?

"Good morning. It's time to wake up," said Timmy's mom as she gently tousled his hair.

Timmy sat up in his bed, rubbed his sleepy eyes, and said, "I'm hungry. What's for breakfast?"

"What would you like?" asked his mom.

Timmy grinned and answered, "Green eggs and ham just like those we read about at the library yesterday. Remember?"

Timmy's mom had taken him to a very special event at their local library, celebrating National Read Across America Day. It's held each year on the birthday of Theodor Seuss Geisel, who is more commonly known as Dr. Seuss, a beloved author and illustrator of children's books. The librarian read aloud their favorite Dr. Seuss stories, and then the children enjoyed birthday cake and ice cream.

"I'm afraid only Dr. Seuss knows how to make green eggs and ham," said Timmy's mom. "Will good old yellow eggs be alright instead?"

"Sounds yummy," said Timmy. He gave his mom a big hug and followed her to the kitchen.
