

Thank You, Mr. Pharmacist

“Mommy, my throat really hurts, and I feel hot,” said Jay.

“Oh dear, I think you may have a fever,” said Mommy.

She called the doctor and made an appointment for Jay. The doctor discovered that Jay had a strep throat infection and prescribed an antibiotic medicine for him to take. Mommy and Jay went to the pharmacy to pick up the medicine. The pharmacist knew all about Jay’s antibiotic and told him exactly how to use it.

“Thank you, Mr. Pharmacist,” said Jay.

“You’re very welcome,” said the pharmacist. “I hope you feel better real soon.” The pharmacist smiled and gave Jay’s hair a friendly tousle.

“He’s really nice, isn’t he Mommy? I think I’m starting to feel better already,” said Jay.

- Jay told his mommy that his _____ was really hurting.
 head foot throat ear
- Jay's mommy thought he had a fever and called the _____.
 doctor mayor
 farmer teacher
- What did the doctor discover in Jay's throat?
 a lump a chunk of food
 a toy an infection
- Jay and his mommy had to go see the _____ to pick up his medicine.
 mailman pharmacist
 neighbor veterinarian
- According to the story, what did Jay think about the pharmacist?
 He was really nice. He was mean.
 He was scary. He was rude.