Who planted apple seeds for more than 49 years?

Johnny Chapman, better known as Johnny Appleseed, was born in Massachusetts. When he was little, his mother took him for walks in the forest. He liked to see the plants and animals.

At the age of 20, he went west, traveling across the Ohio Valley, covering the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, planting apple seeds.

He traveled for 49 years planting seeds and cultivating apple trees so that the western frontier people would have nutritious apples to eat.

His goal was that no one went hungry. Appleseed lived a simple life and was greatly loved for his generosity.
