

LOLA AND HER BAD COUGH

Lola hasn't felt well for days. Her head hurts, her throat itches, and worst of all, she has a terrible cough. That cough does not let her sleep or rest. Despite everything, Lola does not want to go to the doctor.

The thought of doctors terrifies her. She imagines that they are going to give her shots, and they are going to give her medicines with horrible flavors. If they want to take her to the doctor, they will have to drag her there.

She coughs day and night, she coughs at school, and she coughs in the mall. Her cough just does not go away, although she wishes it would. It is a desperate cough. After three days without stopping coughing, her mother decided to her to the clinic to see what solution they could give them. Lola has to think about it. She doesn't want to go, but she wants to stop coughing and start feeling better.

Desperate after so many coughing attacks, Lola is finally convinced to see a doctor. After making an appointment with the doctor, they head to the clinic. The clinic is only five blocks from her home, but there is so much traffic on the road that it takes longer than expected.
