

A few minutes later, they were on their way to the clinic to see what they could do for Patch. The veterinarian who helped them told them not to worry, that what was wrong with her dog was that he needed a canine playmate.

On the way back home, we didn't hesitate for a moment. We stopped at the kennel where we had rescued Patch and walked around to meet who would be his playmate.

Suddenly, a small puppy began to play with Patch. He was a beautiful puppy. At that very moment, we knew that this puppy would be the perfect companion for Patch. After thinking a lot about what name they would give him, they decided to call him Lucca. From that day on, they were like bees to honey. They were always together.

They both play together in the garden of the house. As soon as Lola gets home from school, they come running to greet her. She gives them millions of kisses and pampering. They make Lola feel so happy that she wouldn't know how to live without them.
