

LOLA AND THE ROOF

My friend Lola is a restless soul. She is always moving from side to side, going up and down, energetically and actively. She is no longer a small girl, but she has the agility of a cat. When it comes to climbing trees or climbing walls, she is number one. No one wants to compete against her because she always wins. She even beats children older than her. She is a champion.

Yesterday, without going any further, she discovered that the roof of her house leaked. Immediately, she decided to fix it on her own.

She went to the garage, where she stores all the tools and supplies to do works around the house. She borrowed several of these tools and got to work, without consulting anyone. She is never afraid; she is very brave. Nothing and nobody scares her. She has that virtue since she was a baby.

The first thing she did was to get the ladder and rush to the roof. She was careful to rest the ladder on the gutter and that it was not damaged. It is important that it does not break so that it can collect rainwater. Quickly she climbed up the ladder, and in the blink of an eye, she was on the roof.
