

At first, Lola did not want to talk to her teacher about this phobia. She thought the teacher would laugh at her. She was embarrassed to have to tell her teacher why she did not want to receive stickers.

Little by little, and after hearing the sweet voice of her teacher, Lola calmed down until finally, she could tell her that a neighbor had told her that if she stuck one of those stickers on her body, she could never, ever remove it. Because she believed her neighbor, she became afraid, and that was the reason why she did not want to be given stickers.

Lola's teacher showed her that this was not true and that her neighbor had not told her the truth. Using a sticker, the teacher taught Lola that it could be stuck on and peeled off as many times as desired and that it did not stick permanently.

Finally, Lola believed her teacher and gave the desired gift a chance. Her teacher told her to choose the sticker she liked best. She chose a sticker with a beautiful, radiant sun that was smiling.

That afternoon when she got home, her mother was amazed to see her with the sticker. She was smiling and proudly showing her mom the great trophy she had won. She had finally overcome her fear and would never be afraid of stickers again.
